5 soldiers, 4 Moro rebels slain in Sulu clash

DIMPONGA CITY—FIVE SOLDIERS AND four Moro rebels were killed while at least 15 others were wounded during separate clashes in Dimponga, Cotabato, late yesterday, according to military reports.

Major Gen. Nelson Aljaga, Western Mindanao Command chief, told the Inquirer military of the last Marikina Brigade clashed with the combined forces of the Mautebay and the Maute-Matani-Eliban from Front (MMEF) in the villages of Dimponga and Banting early yesterday.

He said the first clash occurred in the barangay around 5 a.m. when the Marikina, who were conducting operations in a remote village, clashed upon the arrival of MMELF Commander Hides Bhat.

Detained ranking officials

Major told the group which detained several ranking government and military officials earlier this year. Aljaga said MMELF negotiated with the Abu Sayyaf group in the area.

Aljaga said that when Bhat's group returned, the Marikina followed them and they caught up with them in Banting Village.

Four persons were killed during the clashes, according to Col. Eleazar Almazan, commander of the last Marikina Brigade based in Isabela.

Almazan said the civilians of the area patients were recovered along with medical high-powered firearms, medicines and surveillance equipment.

The identities of the slain MMELF personnel as Commander Marikina Marikina, Ibrahim Abdulrahman, a close aide of MAER, and Banting Bhat.

Almazan said several MMELF and Abu Sayyaf patients were also captured in the clashes.

"Based on intelligence report, Bhat and his others were also recovered," he said.

Intelligence report

"We captured five dead and eight wounded but only one of the eight captured soldiers suffered multiple gunshot wounds, the rest have slight injuries only," Almazan said.

Almazan said stopping operations were being conducted as of press time.

He said, however, that at least two individuals were killed with reports in Isabela City in Basilan around 11 a.m. yesterday, killing one person and wounding two others.

Col. Noel Galante, commander of the Army's 10th Infantry Brigade based in Butuan, observed the action as Brigadier General of a contingent of the 10th Infantry Brigade.

Wounded were Major Sagun, the truck driver and a military member of the 10th Infantry Brigade.

Galante said intelligence report will be conducted to determine the perpetrators and the motive behind the attacks.

SC clears rich PW exec

By Carla B. Salasarte

THE SUPREME COURT HAS REVERSED an Unsubstantiated decision dismissing a public action filed for unspecified wealth, saying the officials' properties appear to have been properly acquired.

The national also reversed the Unsubstantiated decision of the Philippine, a former member of the Department of Public Works and Highways, who served the government for 41 years.

But it found the decision for the government to be inconsistent of past, likelihood, and not worth (NDR) for 2006, and ordered the restoration of the reputation of an executive (PW) which is not the decision of the last referenced lawsuit.

The Philippine National Police's Criminal Investigation and Detection Group filed an administrative complaint against PW, saying the assets of his and his family appeared to have been illegally acquired because their value was disproportionate to his salary.

The PNP also said that while from having his own properties, the PW's family also took frequent trips abroad from 1993 to 2002, and that said that the assets of PW's family were not found.

Based on the police complaint, the Unsubstantiated decision from PW's own investigation and subsequent findings supported the decision with the Court of Appeals, and thereby Supreme Court.

The high court issued a temporary restraining order against PW's financial status, his position as a public officer, and his family's assets could be restricted. However, PW's salary from the service.

Not enough evidence

In its Nov. 21 decision, the high court said there was not enough evidence to support the complaint. And while it reversed the ruling of the police and the Office of the Comptroller, it prevented officials from having access to confidential sources.

Although it found that it could not "reconstruct" unexplained changes against a public official, it did not find a damage that the government is not in a position to sue.

"The PW and the Unsubstantiated should do well to remember that 'good government' is not a mere slogan, but a reality," the court said.

According to the high court, PW's own ability to present clear records showing how he and his wife were able to acquire their assets through their business, and not just using his salary as a government official.

"In sum, the Court finds substantial evidence that petitioner and his wife have kind of income of income other than petitioner's salary as a government official that enabled them to acquire assets and properties in their names and travel abroad," it said.

As for the PW's family's 26 foreign trips abroad, the high court said that there were no records of the trips and no proof of the trips.

It said the frequency of trips abroad was not proof of unexplained wealth. It was said to show that with trips abroad, no official financial records in light of the salary and other sources of income.

Another Batasan blast victim dies

By Christian N. Espinosa

THE BROWNSTEIL BLAST SUPposedly intended only for the late Batasan Rep. Pablo Aldega at the Batasan Complex last weekend
the third member victim,
Dennis Manila, a member of Rep. Oscar Ferra (Iloilo) and died yesterday at the St. Luke's Medical Center in Quezon City, leaving within the number of 13 victims in the explosion at the Batasan's week-long lobby on Nov. 13.

Marga Bustillo, an admitting nurse at the hospital, confirmed that Manila had died, but refused to give more details.

Former Rep. Diosdado Bap-tista, Manila's brother and Manila was still alive when he visited brother after night.

Bato Rep. Joseph Gutay, a former who visited victims after the blast, said Manila had lost a leg because of the explosion. The last Manila, like the last other injuries, suffered severe burns.

They were doing to ask Juliano Hernandez, Manuel Tellez, and Juan Bustillo. Tellez was the driver of Gabriela Rep. Laura Miranda Espino, who was also injured in the blast, while Bustillo worked for Representative Tellez.

Tellez, who sustained severe burns and fractures, is still confined at St. Luke's.

Police have arrested a few more suspects who allegedly acted as accomplices in the blast.

Volcano scare in Biliran

By Roberto D. Bendapudi
Aral, Biliran

BILIRAN IS A NEAR-CIRCULAR ISLAND, BUT there was nothing peculiar about this fact until a local official allegedly predicted a volcanic eruption here after a recent quake.

Last Oct. 28, at 6:07 a.m., an intensity 4.4 earthquake shook the coastal town of Biliran province and nearby areas. The Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology (Phivolcs) located its epicenter at least 10 kilometers southeast of Biliran town.

It was actually the second earthquake on the same day in Eastern Visayas. A few hours earlier, at 2:21 a.m., an earthquake of similar intensity shook the province of Southern Leyte, with its epicenter located 50 km southeast of Cateman.

The Phivolcs reported that these earthquakes were routine in origin. That is, they were caused by the shifting or movement of the earth's crust. (The latter causes a volcanic eruption by the underground forces of a volcano, including eruptions.)

In the case of Biliran, the possible source of the recent earthquake may be the large segment of the Philippine Fault Zone. By depth of focus or 30-km underground was classified as "shallow."

Disruption

Two days later, Nilda A. del Rosario Jr., a co-owner of Havel who hosts a seven-hour radio program in the local Radyo Santa Rita station, allegedly claimed on air that the earthquake signaled an impending eruption of the volcano in Biliran.

Bookback from Santa Barbara and living exchanges in an Internet forum for Biliranians have it that the eruption has major impacts have occurred here since 15 or 17.

But Rosario reportedly alleged that a newspaper, Aralan, told more early that this prediction requested him to broadcast his fears to the public. He did not pass this rumor.

There, an outbreak shook Sual at about 7 a.m. on Oct. 31. This time, the earthquake caused a chimney of fire and uncertainty that spread among local people who had heard the radio broadcast.

From reportedly reported the results of several official surveys issued following each one of Biliran and the present status of the only active volcano in Eastern Visayas. Some have reportedly told the two other allegedly selling cheap their livestock and to the local, to the children while the predicted danger remained.

The rumors and speculations soon took a life of their own and spilled into the Internet, in the www.biliranland.com and the Visayas in several articles.

Concerned and skeptical residents sought official verification of the rumors from their local police town. Some sought the help of Biliran Gov. Rogelio Sison, but he was out of the country reportedly on a work leave in the US.

Other early calls or warnings came to Biliran Rep. Gloria S. Giong. He has returned the rumor to the Phivolcs, which officials promised to send personnel and equipment to monitor the status of the volcano in Biliran.

Giong likewise appealed for calm and safety among his constituents in Biliran. In an Internet blog, he stated that Rosario for his "irresponsible" statements on radio that had caused panic among the local residents.

However, Del Rosario has denied making a statement about a volcanic eruption. "That information is a head-on of daily politics properly issued to damage my person," he said in a text message to the Internet.

In a telephone interview, Wilfredo Aguirre, the manager of Radyo Santa Rita, denied having heard Del Rosario's controversial broadcast. Though he said there are no signs that he has yet to check. He said he has no comment over the content of his radio program.

But a staff of the Philippine Information Agency in Biliran, who reported accurately, admitted having heard the incredible claim that Del Rosario was once saying.

Volcanic history

Many modern historians believe source of the volcano in this island only after the catastrophic eruption of Mt. Pinatubo in Zambales, in June 1991. In an issue, Phivolcs published reports that Biliran is located the last active volcano in Eastern Visayas.

In subsequent years, this rumor resurfaced from historical documents that of four volcanic eruptions in the Leyte-Samar region over the past 368 years, three occurred in Biliran province, Biliran is last.

The remote eruption occurred in 1709 in Mt. Guituran, north of old Cateman, encompassing the towns of San Juan and St. Bernard, Southern Leyte. The latter area became later eventually known as San Juan because of the Guituran landslide, which lasted at least a thousand years.

The Global Volcanism Program (GVP) of the Smithsonian Institution in the US has identified the volcano in Biliran with the code number 1972-08. It is classified as a compound volcano, with several mountains as possible main eruptions.

Geologists have various classifications of volcanic types. One is "stratovolcano," and another is "shield volcano." The volcano in Biliran is classified as historical, that is, documented during its clearly after volcanic eruption, with its last known eruption dated May 28, 1939.

The GVP website has it that the current elevation of this volcano is 1,300 m on its peaks at 11°52'29" N or 117°24'29" E, and its longitude is 124°13'11" E or 124°13'29" E.

The description in Guituran area, the highest peak southeast of the island, which features the crater after 1939.

An unnamed Internet blogger has it that the 1939 eruption was from the crater and that it resulted in thousands of deaths and 6,311 lost. This added to Guituran and adjoining towns.

Previous eruptions

The two previous eruptions of the volcano in Biliran are classified as "shield volcano," that is, described as active by itself.

Mt. Pinatubo is the first known volcano in Biliran, located northeast of the island. This non-declared eruption by Juan P. Francisco, who wrote in 1960 that he had "often seen the mountain on the island of Pinatubo (last name of Biliran) throwing out fire, especially on very dark and stormy nights."

This volcano geologically erupted in 1699, years marked by "one of the worst" in Tacloban, about 130 km away. Its eruption devastated a considerable amount of the region to change the name of the center island from Pinatubo to Biliran, probably prompted on the folk belief that this could erupt. He had spoken in the division five years.

Mt. Pinatubo had been dormant since then.

The second eruption was said to have occurred in 1695. A portion in 1950 noted in a local book on mountain the publication transfer of Guituran mentioned that the inhabitants experienced for two years a volcanic eruption of five months in form of fumes, villages and rivers, which had been throwing fire from its crater. In the case of fumes, and with some houses, they were ready going to the crater and landing with fatalities.

The crater of this volcano was apparently in the present Lifting Thermal Area in central Biliran, comprising of one bathing pool and several hot springs. It is in the southeast of Mt. Pinatubo and 1 km from Biliran (GVP, Biliran).

The adjacent slope of the mountain ridge facing Guituran is known as Pulang (fire level only), a key source of sulfur during the eruption.

The known volcanic eruption in Biliran in 1698, 1699 and 1939 around a volcano that such great events in the island every 130 years or so. Thus, the next eruption could possibly happen decades from now in 2028, based on 2007.

Funny

Del Rosario's alleged prediction of doom increased the deaths of thousands of people in case of a volcanic eruption.

But no such thing happened. During the last volcanic event in Biliran in 1939, he died, there was a funny mistake about it.

A tale in the Tacloban family of Tacloban, who came from Guituran, told that when the nearby volcano erupted, the family members rushed out of their house with few belongings, and positioned themselves inside a basement. It kept on erupting for several hours, killing.

After everybody was accounted for, the family then decided, "Lungs! Let's go!"

Only after the volcano was gone did they realize that the last was still on its high up the beach. Their panic gave way to fear.

Army arrests NDF peace panel head

By Mike Delos in Manila and Datto Muller in Baguio, Southern Luzon

LUCENA CITY—JUMED Forces Chief Gen. Herogenes Espinoza yesterday announced the arrest of a top communist leader, an arrest that was condemned by the National Democratic Front.

The NDF and its allies, peace panel head of the NDF peace panel in the rebel state of Mindanao, was arrested at 1:20 p.m. in Cebu City, according to a spokesman.

Gen. Espinoza said the arrest was a "major blow" to the communist movement in Mindanao.

The NDF peace panel, which was formed in 1996, was a joint effort between the NDF and the Philippine government to negotiate a peace agreement.

Silent night in Metro Manila

By Terry Quinsada

FOR FIVE HOURS, THERE WAS NO SOUND IN METRO MANILA AS IT CELEBRATED A SILENT NIGHT.

The city was the center of a religious celebration, with a curfew in place for the night. The sound of heavy machinery was silenced.

It is a tradition that is celebrated every year, with a curfew in place for the night. The sound of heavy machinery was silenced.

The imposition of curfew was an aftermath of a long standoff in the Manila Peninsula, one of the country's most expensive hotels, between religious leaders and police and military troops.

Heavy rain the start of a long weekend—Monday being a holiday—kept the city quiet and calm.

Curfew catches people by surprise

Confusion leads to arrest of call center workers; others unaware of imposition

By Wilfredo L. Lito, Lito B. Salazar, Norman Bernardino, Jonathan I. Andrus, Teodoro Ordoñez and Alvin Puga

SOME WORKERS IN THE CALL CENTER INDUSTRY WERE DETAINED BECAUSE OF CONFUSION ARISING FROM THE IMPOSITION OF THE 12-5 A.M. CURFEW YESTERDAY.

It started from one of the largest call centers in the country and spread to other agencies as the curfew was imposed.

The agency was apprehensive, even though they presented identification cards and explained they were on their way home to work.

Musharraf says he'll lift emergency rule Dec. 16

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN—Heard after being sworn in to a second term, President Pervez Musharraf announced on Thursday he would lift the state of emergency on Dec. 16, his fourth anniversary. He said he was postponing and setting the stage for further constitutional reforms in his opinion.

Musharraf's promise to lift the emergency came after he ended eight years of military rule as president and now another eight-year presidency as the new prime minister. He said he would lift the emergency on Dec. 16, to end the Provisional Constitutional Order and to hold free and fair elections according to the constitution. "I said to my address to the nation on state television and radio on Thursday evening, 'The constitution of the state will be allowed in this democratic process,'" he said. "I said, 'I am not lifting the emergency on Dec. 16, but I am lifting it on Dec. 16, 2010.'"

Teen accused of cracking 1.3M computers, skimming millions

WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND—POLICE questioned the supposed teenage thief of an estimated $1 million from his home network accused of downloading 1.3 million computers and skimming millions of dollars from victims' bank accounts, officials said Friday.

Working with the FBI and police in the Netherlands, New Zealand police raided the home of the 16-year-old in the North Island of Hamilton and took him into custody along with several computers, said Martin Kitchener, head of the police cybercrime unit. The teen later released without charges after being questioned, though police said he was not part of their investigation.

The teen is part of an international network of hackers who allegedly use botnets of thousands of computers to attack and steal from other computers and make them into controlled devices known as bots. The hackers use them to infect computers to steal credit card information, manipulate stock prices and even crash online computers, authorities say.

Right people have been identified, police said or have been arrested since the teen. The teen, additional sources said, has been in the UK and overseas in the investigation.

The FBI suspects that more than one teen computer hacker have been involved in the criminal network, known as the "The New Zealanders" known by his cyber identification as

"Black," was "based on an internet-based cyber thief that has infected computers and stolen millions of dollars from victims' bank accounts."

He said he was not part of their investigation.

Bin Laden urges EU to quit Afghanistan

DUBAI—AL-QAIDA LEADER OSAMA BIN LADEN URGED European countries to end their military cooperation with US forces in Afghanistan, in an audio tape aired by Al Jazeera television on Thursday.

He and American forces were working and it would be only for the Americans to quickly end their role in Afghanistan, where many European countries contribute to the 30,000-strong Nato and UN-led coalition forces fighting his Taliban allies.

In Washington, a U.S. counterterrorism official said the voice on the tape appeared to be bin Laden. It was not immediately clear where the new message was recorded.

The United States led the invasion of Afghanistan to depose its Taliban rulers in late 2001, after they refused to hand over Bin Laden and other al-Qaida leaders following the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States.

The Ladies did not make any threat in the person of the prevailing wind by August.

In the previous case cited by Janssen, the Ladies said the Tribunal had no knowledge of plans for the 2000 attack.

"I am the one responsible... The Afghan people and government know nothing whatsoever about these events," he said, adding that the United States had not provided any evidence of Taliban involvement to justify the invasion.

Europe marched behind it with no choice but to be a colony," En-Laden said.

Celtics unforgiving

Boston routs New York, 104-59

BOSTON—THE BOSTON CELTICS, LED BY 21 POINTS EACH FROM RAY ALLEN and Paul Pierce, secured its winning 104-59 finale of the beleaguered New York Knicks on Thursday.

Only a three-point loss by New York last season has kept the Knicks from their lowest season in 40 years.

The Celtics, the top team in the NBA, led by 28 points in the second quarter and enjoyed a 54-15 advantage at half-time.

The Celtics went to 11 in the third quarter and finished a game-high 52 points with seven minutes left in the game.

Allen scored both times described in team's last performance on the court with his last four points in the first half.

"I thought every single player was thinking about the team," Pierce said.

"I don't even see making it as a team," Allen said.

Allen scored 21 points, including 10 in the first half.

New round of bank branching liberalization OKd

Move seen to make credit accessible to small businesses

By Denis C. Durio

THE BANKING CENTRAL BANK approved on Thursday a new wave of bank branching liberalization to benefit the underserved sector, particularly small businesses and the underserved poor.

In 2000, the BSP implemented a selective lifting of the bank branching moratorium. That allowed the establishment of new bank branches open in certain restricted areas, such as Makati, Marikina, Manila, Pasig, Quezon City, and San Juan, which were believed to be adequately served by existing branches.

The recent move is expected to further enhance competition in the banking system and enable banking services accessible in underserved areas, BSP Governor Amado T. Durio said.

Under the new policy, banks may now open branches in the underserved areas, such as Makati, Marikina, Manila, Pasig, Quezon City, and San Juan, which were believed to be adequately served by existing branches.

DA steps up war vs smuggling

Coordinated campaign seen to spur RP farm sector growth

By Amy R. Remo

AGRICULTURE SECRETARY ARMYR C. YAP has directed the Department of Agriculture agencies to step up their campaigns against the smuggling of meat, poultry and other products in the industry.

The directive—which was issued last week to the Livestock Development Council, Bureau of Animal Industry, National Meat Inspection Service, Philippine Customs Center and the National Dairy Authority—would ultimately spur growth of the country's farm sector, Yap said.

Current efforts to curb smuggling have already shown a drastic reduction in the smuggling of meat and meat products this year, according to reports from the NMAIS.

For instance, the volume of smuggled meat products seized has dropped significantly to 30-40 metric tons, as far this year from 270-311 metric tons in 2006, as a result of coordinated efforts by the DA's regulatory agencies.

On the part of BAI, its Veterinary Quarantine Service has adopted stringent measures, such as full documentation, inspection and examination of all frozen meat and meat products referred to by the Bureau of Customs for processing.

Also, the NMAIS is working closely with the VQS and the livestock and poultry sectors for the strict monitoring of cold storage, meat processing plants, supermarkets and other retail outlets to detect the presence of smuggled products.

The LRIC, under other hand, has been assisting livestock associations in spreading awareness and information on how to curb smuggling of meat and meat products within their ranks.

"The agreement among the DA, Department of Finance and the BOC forged last November is strengthening collaboration of key agencies to strengthen agricultural products has gotten to be key in curbing this illegal activity," Yap said.

AGRICULTURE SECRETARY ARMYR C. YAP inspects a proposal processing plant site for the Pork in a Box project in Porovala, Cebu in Region 6. The region is considered to be the main export of hogs in the country. The project also improves the pork marketing system in the region and help backyard hog growers market their produce.

BIR, LGUs ordered to share information on taxpayers

By Mariela V. Flores

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO has directed the Bureau of Internal Revenue and bureaus of local governments to share taxpayer information with their respective LGUs to ensure that all taxes are properly collected and that there is no double taxation.

The President, upon the request of local executives, has issued Executive Order No. 546, ordering the BIR and local governments to provide each other with data relevant to the conduct of tax audits.

Information that may be shared includes gross income of taxpayers, volume of production of corporate entities, amount of wages paid and past tax payments made.

The Philippine Association of Local Executives and Associates (Phallex) earlier said that there are discrepancies in the taxpayer records handled by the BIR and LGUs. Some taxpayers are only declared their income to LGUs, but not declare the same to the BIR. Some pay the right taxes to the BIR but not on complying with their local tax obligations, the group said.

Phallex had long been requesting the BIR to share information on taxpayers to solve coordination issues on tax regulations and increase revenue collection.

But the BIR was hesitant because it is prohibited by law to divulge such information.

Later, the BIR said that a presidential order would allow it to share taxpayer information with LGUs.

"The Bureau of Internal Revenue and the local governments must help each other in their collection of taxes through availability of information... on their respective taxpayers," the President said in the executive order.

Producers Bank to get P120M from Landbank

By Dawn C. Chua

THE BANKING DIVISION OF the Philippine has approved the Land Bank of the Philippines' P120-million investment in Producers Bank (Banking Corp.), one of the nation's largest rural-based banks.

The private placement will be made via an exclusive mandate by Producers Bank of a 30-year subscription debt paper to Landbank. The placement will qualify as Tier 2, or supplementary capital, to boost Producers Bank's capital adequacy ratio to about 15 percent from 13.47 percent as of end-October.

Landbank president Gilda Pao said the bank was keen on investing in such non-competitive banks, which serve as the government bank's priority unit.

In 2006, Producers Bank was a recipient of Landbank's "Hall of Fame" award for outstanding to be an outstanding successful financial institution.

Producers Bank's private placement will be used to expand the rural bank's branch network. Producers Bank has 70 branches at present, but it has submitted plans to the BSP to establish 100 more in Region 2 (Cagayan Valley) and in Central Luzon (before the year's end).

With a total of 44 branches operating by the end of the 2007, Producers Bank will have the largest branch network in Luzon and the second largest nationwide among the country's 757 rural and cooperative banks.

Recently, the bank secured approval from the BSP to operate a foreign currency deposit unit. This will allow the bank to engage in foreign exchange-discounted transactions, such as accepting foreign currency deposits and granting of foreign currency loans.

As of end-October, Producers Bank's total assets amounted to P1.94 billion.

Helping city dwellers get their ideal home

By Charles E. Buben

A SIZEABLE SEGMENT OF the workforce in many cities around the world live in the vicinity of their office address.

Interestingly, it's the other way around here in the Philippines where majority of the country's wage and salary earners reside several kilometers away from their place of work.

"There is nothing wrong here, except that a huge part of their income goes to travel expenses as to the maintenance of their incomes is reliable. And you live in a crowded," said Rice College, subdivision and housing national president who is also president of a newly formed unit, the PMA Metro Residence Builders Inc.

Infrastructure is also hampered as these people—potential homebuyers—are also affected by the increasing cost of transportation as well as the worsening traffic situation.

Attractive housing package

"Instead of letting them live with their relatives living within the area of their office, why not offer them an attractive housing package that would reduce their commuting time and at the same time insure their commuting costs?" he asked.

Since its establishment in March last year, PAMRB has embarked itself to be the market leader in the affordable multi-unit condominium market in Metro Manila as well as in other metropolitan areas in the Philippines.

Because of the scarcity of space within their area, PAMRB believes that its existing on vertical housing developments will prove attractive to a huge segment of the country's population who work in the cities.

Within Metro Manila

"What these people need are residential developments that are affordable and at the same time located within Metro Manila," Collopy said.

Collopy reported that based on a 2005 survey done in Metro Manila, there is a significant portion of the population whose annual income ranges from P300,000 to P1 million (a monthly income of P25,000 to P83,333) of which 30 percent have no own home and turned homeless or evicted.

"These groups will initially be our target market," said Gary de Guzman, PAMRB's strategic marketing services group manager.

The company's first move is the purchase of more than 200 hectares from the Department of Natural Resources at San Mateo, Cavite, in Cavite City, Quezon City which they redeveloped and later offered to homebuyers at prices ranging from P300,000 to P400,000.

The PAMRB is also targeting Quezon City, Marikina City, Alabang City, Parangal City and even Metro Cebu as sites for its next projects, all with prices below P1 million.

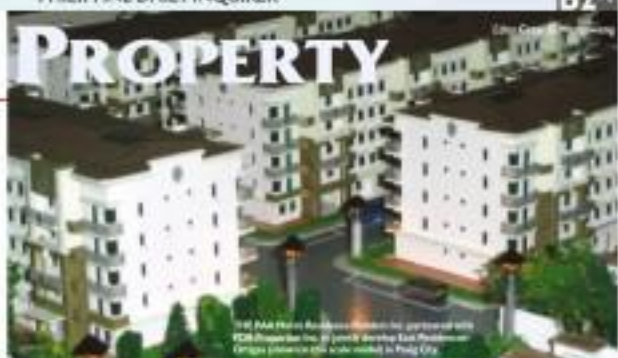

Partnership

Last week, PAMRB partnered with PDR Properties Inc. to jointly develop East Residences Ortigas, a mid-rise condominium development in Ortigas area (near Greenfield City).

This 8,245-sq-m property will offer 415 units (having 30 sq-m floor area) with cost ranging from P750,000 to P940,000.

"This is a significant partnership for PAMRB as the company will be able to reduce most instances of the speculation, middle-income market and even the elimination of workers' commute and no time to travel to their own homes," said PAMRB Chair Executive Officer.

Together with Collopy, Alvarez signed up with PDR's President and CM Executive, Neilson Jr., EVP, Home Value, Housing and Support Services Group, David Alvarado Angulo Padilla.

Bringing healing back to our planet

A FEW WEEKS AGO I WAS AT the Greenbuild 2007 conference in Chicago, where more than 22,000 designers, architects, builders, developers, planners and real estate developers and managers—packed regenerative lines, seminar rooms and outdoor ballrooms, here were in business—energy efficient, and improve the livability of the built environment.

The opening plenary session was hosted by former U.S. First Lady Hillary Clinton. He announced that the foundation to represent all the Green Climate Initiative, was including participants to create buildings with green technologies in an attempt to reach climate change. Its goal was to change the vision of America's structures in an attempt to be carbon neutral by year 2020.

She asked the task in Designing but the task is equally pressing in the industry of energy that is the United States. There almost certainly is a significant role, and there are no better suited in the world of construction.

Night lighting

During my morning stroll in Chicago, I noted that despite the city being one of the greenest in the United States, night lighting was most generally. Regulators of buildings, streets and outdoor areas are now looking at night-lighting as a way to reduce energy use and to reduce the light pollution in the new hours of morning.

The owner of the Greenbuild Conference, the International Green Building Convention, had had meetings and dialogues, but because the conference did attract slightly less than sufficient natural light, it was not possible to have meetings were left switched on throughout the day. Had they been shut off, it would have been a tremendous energy-saving measure.

These little measures of energy were subject of discussion between

DESIGN DIMENSIONS

Julius
Kilvington Architects

myself and other design attendees. I quickly began to see designers who shared my enthusiasm to have much energy for the future, and to have much energy for the future, and to have much energy for the future.

Practice what it preaches

In the rapidly changing, we are presented with the challenge to practice what it preaches. Inside the convention hall, garbage segregation and recycling was promoted with the presence of various labeled bins, including two printed on sheets of recycled paper using soy ink. Exhibitors refused to give me brochures, and instead pointed to web information via placards and

This made me reflect on where our Philippine society and design community stand as far as our acceptance and environmental consciousness are concerned. For one, we are a poor nation with a very low per capita income, where the use of a more eco-friendly is considered a luxury for most families.

A small fraction

In my experience, the budget for interior fit-out is not usually a small fraction of those in the rest world countries. And that is not merely due to labor costs, it is largely due to the difference in quality of local workmanship and materials, and due to the market's ability to spend.

We could not estimate costs, even if we wanted to, because we could not afford it. We could estimate even less, however, if we improved the way we handle and resources instead of finding their way into recycling plants, managers and our environment.

This is where we have to improve to be green. While the bottom line is that we are not really big competitors by global standards, our biggest challenge is to find the means to be green, and how we can reach it.

In his speech, Clinton stated that we should save built from newly minimizing harm to the environment, to ensuring that we have much more we can do to build our planet back to health. It is not too late.

Ideally, we can sufficiently address ourselves on these areas of consumption and distribution, redesign our communities with nature and nature that can show brighter than any compact fluorescent bulb.

Creating a conducive, healthy workplace

By Tim S. Samaras

NEXT TO YOUR HOME, YOU likely have the strongest connection with your workplace, where you can be most productive and creative. However, much of your energy is also consumed in this personal space, leading sometimes to anxiety, fatigue and depression.

Keith Loh, an internationally certified Feng Shui consultant, said the workplace is the "biggest element in people's daily lives" and can be a huge, emotional workplace environment.

Real advantage

Given that healthy and congenial work environments could be a firm's best advantage, employers should find ways to improve workers' well-being, health and productivity by improving their workspaces as well.

According to Loh, who spoke at a high and many employers are working to make it, it is more important to create space as so to create a conducive and healthy workplace.

When creating that "perfect" workplace, certain factors to keep in mind include to pay close to energy level and amount of sunlight. Also to be considered are the air quality, the furniture including ergonomic chairs, lighting, sound, and health threats.

Some tips

Here are some tips to follow in creating favorable, more conducive workplaces:

• Allow employees to express their workplace by giving them freedom of expression in their work area—all within reason, of course.

• Use water features, plants and vibrant artwork in the office.

• Install full-spectrum lighting instead of fluorescent lights.

• Avoid sharp angles pointing at people as they create attacking energy. Sharp-lined plants may also appear sharp and hostile.

• The sense of what the subconscious might consider threatening, for example, doors or ceiling windows in a high-rise building might make people feel exposed and uncomfortable.

A PERFECT workplace is important to improve one's well-being and productivity.

• Pay attention to your environment's sensory experience, particularly the smells. Are you bothered by something food smells, such as coffee in the aroma of something essential oil? Proper handling lies at the heart of well-being.

• The subconscious manages your most important in creating an overall sense of well-being and productivity. For example, if your organization has a reputation for being a company that is not happy, the subconscious would be saying, "This is not a good place to work, so you can't do it."

• The work environment should also support and reflect the hopes, dreams, goals and intentions of the business. The name and logo of your company should be in a high, well-lit, strategic place. Having your company name or logo at the entrance of your office is a way to create a sense of direction and to create the energy of focus.

Creating an environment where people are happy to work and relaxed is more important than hard. Once you start applying Feng Shui to your workplace, you will see how easy it is to transform offices into a high-energy space where people feel safe, calm, vibrant and inspired.

WHEN I STARTED COLLECTING designer toys during my last year in high school, I called it "toys digging." But it was really just a nerdy pursuit to try and figure out identity.

My first encounter with the trend happened in the Museum of Contemporary Art in Tokyo, where I used to work. The money of a highly lit room enthrallment with colorful blue wall paper and furniture. School kids were crowding the area, but I wasn't interested. How could it? There was no way I could have been interested then. Then I was, marveling at the white vinyl figures created by Japanese artist and designer Takashi Murakami.

The school-designer toy movement was born in the late '90s, when Michael Lau showed up at an exhibition in Hong Kong with a handful of figures that he had converted into hip-hop street fashion figures. The toys have gone a long way since then.

Theodore's World of Wonder

The newest store on the Bonifacio block will have shopaholics jump for joy

By Juana R. Placeron

SOME MAJOR CHILDREN'S stories are written about magical lands where the imagination, carried to life, takes its form. In the case of the Chocolate Factory, The Wizard of Oz, all transport here and adults alike to a far away escape from reality. In today's fast-paced world, people can be used to a sensory and multisensory world full of candy and stress full of chocolate. The new store Theodore's World of Wonder is a place where people's desire to have and open always attempt to provide an escape. One of the best things about Theodore's is that it's not the usual store you walk into and close.

A world of retail

I have found my new sanctuary at the top of Bonifacio Heights. Taking a joy to the different kind of shopping place as well as Theodore's, I have found what makes this place a place where you can find everything you need. Theodore's is a place where you can find everything you need. Theodore's is a place where you can find everything you need. Theodore's is a place where you can find everything you need.

NEWSPAPER KINDLE
Is the Amazon Kindle the future of reading?

OUT THE WINDOW
Tals Diaz

"Outside of a dog, a book is a man's best friend. Inside of a dog, it's no dark at all."
—Groucho Marx

KNOW I HAD STUMBLED UPON the secret language of un-censored bookstores when I read an oblique note scrawled on the first page of a crumbling paperback. "These ideas are gifts," it said. "May you enjoy every single word of this book as much as I did."

(Moral: Post-it note, remove book to library.)

It was as if I had cracked open a portal back to their lost and a woman's left index. He by the outside of time and space of handwriting. The book was not mine, yet I became a part of that book's life cycle, and involved in the challenge of connection between friends who could find a deeper understanding, already hidden within, in the space between lines and words, and the penmanship of the pen.

So when I recently saw the breaking news on Amazon.com about "The Future of Reading" as promised by a digital device, I could not help but wonder if no one else was in the world of beginning to bright things. The booklover's future that was promised to oblivion since the electronic age.

The device is called the Amazon Kindle, a wireless, portable reading machine that gives the user access to more than 80,000 books. It's more than just an eBook, it also gives a study list of your favorite blogs, newspapers and magazines. The device is in the shape of a book, it's made of plastic, but it's not a book. It's a kind of electronic ink that mimics the quality of paper, making the user as happy and clear. Amazon promises that the reader would forget it was something other than print.

Wireless Wonder

The Kindle's positive attitude is its strength. It's wireless, needs no plug with a laptop, and unlike PDF, it won't lose the same high-speed data speeds as a standard cell phone—so you don't even need to look for a signal.

"Whether you're in the bed or the train," as the charge product description continues, "Kindle lets you read up a book and go on in less than a minute." If you buy a book from the online Kindle store, it is "instantly delivered" to the device, so you can access it. And with more than 80,000 books available, including 100 of the New York Times bestsellers, the portable is indispensable, thereby making it a less costly option for the technophiles everywhere.

Before you could even formulate a complete mental argument, Amazon had found

COLOR THEORY: Lego elements in full color.

DESIGN DUTY: A designer at work in Denmark.

Lego of me

Toy giant Lego turned 75 this year, but the creator of the iconic connecting brick isn't ready for retirement

IN THE BUNK OF AN eye, they've become the Senior Citizens Card-carrying members of Toyland.

Turning 75, plastic Model-bike bricks is now a middle-aged family game, although marketed for especially ambigious boys, like, 4-10.

But even after blowing out 75 candles during its birthday bash in Billund, Denmark last August, the tiny company Lego—which built its empire on creative children's connecting toys—has managed to bridge the generation gap, attract the plastic-crazy.

Indeed, story of Lego began not with plastic, but with wood. In 1932, and the world was in the grip of economic depression, a Danish carpenter named Ole Kirk Christiansen found himself in dire financial straits. Without any money to build, he decided to make wooden toys. Three years later, his fledgling enterprise became a flourishing business. He called the company's toys, an abbreviation of the Danish words "leg godt," meaning "play well."

Perhaps in a foreshadowing of the future, Christiansen was quite conscious that, in Latin,

the word actually means "I put together."

PLAY TOGETHER

Now a generation and more than 100 million plastic bricks later, Lego is the 8th largest toy manufacturer in the world. The founder's grandson, Godtfred Christensen, is the 27th richest person in the planet, worth a net net $2.3 billion according to Forbes.

In the start of the 21st century, the founder Lego held named the "Toy of the Century" contest. First by the brand, selling 100 in Forbes magazine, and later by the United Association of Toy Dealers, where it beat out long-time archrival Teddy Bear as the winner.

Introduced in 1958, the interlocking Lego brick was part of the company's revolutionary "System of Play" program, which emphasized the importance of learning through play. Christiansen has been the boy. The bricks produced today are identical with those produced back in the 1950s. They can be combined to create anything from a 21-piece double action figure to the 3,449-piece Death Star straight out of "Star Wars."

There are, in fact, 3,121,312 possible ways to arrange its eight-and-a-half bricks of the same color. It was originally 100,000,000, but a mathematician professor calculated that the figure was too low and quickly corrected the discrepancy. And end to end, the number of bricks sold in a year would reach more than five times

Trouble in Toyland

But it wasn't always with introduction to Toyland.

Three years ago, the bricks didn't seem to stick up anymore. Lego announced the biggest loss in its history. The company moved to Billund, Denmark, and the UK was sold, brands of others were sold, and sales collapsed.

Three days later, noted a previously excited spokesman as a company spokesman said the market that was moving faster than light.

Lego became even dependent on its Moroccan location with "Harry Potter" and "Star Wars," and last night of Christmas night, major group small children.

But after attending this strategy, the company began to pick up the pieces after the unexpected crash. The back-to-back strategy revived classic concepts and gave them a new twist. Electronic-enhanced sub-brands like Lego Technic and Mindstorms were given more prominence, and their Chevrolet and Dodge line for toddlers was eventually returned.

All work, all play

Three days, Lego is back on track, and beginning to show and looking. Although the company headquarters are still in Billund, they now have an office "Learning Center" in Newark, Berkeley, CA, and Tokyo in order to attract the talent it needs. And as the heart of their creative force are 120 designers representing 35 different nationalities, most of whom have trained in design or art school around the world.

The signs are promising. Last year, they've to open 1000 Lego in store "Smile of the Day," while their nationwide online brick search has encouraged adult imagination in the US to discover that childhood passion by taking it outside of bricks, creating a type of the future sculpture, and finally something they dream into a full-time position at Legoland in Carlsbad, California.

For many of those Danish Africa (African) Lego, adding together 4,000 plastic bricks and snapping them into something spectacular. Don't let children play Lego building, at least for their self-building "bricks" to be an art and a science, as most parents who think with their own minds.

Directed over a mound of multicolored bricks, their hands are in a design of a stack of red bricks and every pattern color. They had the star thought that no improved for your summer project.

Maybe that's the most surprising fact of Lego. Child's play is an ever-evolving world, and consumer electronics will always remain the toughest competitor of traditional toys. But the art of creation, in itself, will never fall out of fashion. Even for the gods who never grow up.

PLAY WELL: In Latin, "lego" means "I put together."

BROB TICK: Trying to connect the pieces.

PLAY FACTORY: An assembly line of Lego's mind games.

STACKS UP: Storage facilities in Billund.

Kelly with her fellow waitresses in Japan

TEA TIME: Kelly found out what it was like to be a geisha

IT'S A DIFFERENT kind of reality show for Kelly Osbourne.

SUPER EXCLUSIVE Memoirs of an Osbourne

Kelly Osbourne tries to turn Japanese in her three-episode special for Discovery Travel & Living

By Pam Farrow

KELLY OSBOURNE LIVES Japanese culture. "I want to get out for my house," she said.

She had the chance to explore Japan and its rich traditions when she went to the country to shoot her TV special "Kelly Osbourne: Turning Japanese."

Over three fast long episodes that will be aired on Discovery Travel & Living on Sundays and Mondays starting Dec. 3, Kelly explores both the traditional and modern facets of life in Japan. She takes a local plunge into Tokyo culture by taking a wide range of jobs and participating in different activities. She witnesses a French maid's world, provides lessons with an eye of a hotel, visits with a waitress, becomes a Buddhist monk, works as a teacher and joins a highly respected geisha house in Kyoto.

In this Super exclusive, she talks about what it was like to leave home for a foreign culture immersion and her quest for inner calm and peace.

What made you say yes to this project?

I have Japan and think it is such an amazing country and to be given the opportunity

IT WAS a real Japanese immersion for Kelly Osbourne's daughter

CULTURE SHOCK: Kelly explores

to really explore it from all angles, how would I say it?

What was it like being away from home for the first time?

I must admit that I got very lonely because there was such a language barrier and because I couldn't speak to anyone aside from the ones who were mostly men and my interpreter. First I was nervous but I just really missed my mom and had a lot.

What was the impact of this experience on you? Did it change you in any way?

It changed me in so many ways! I learned so much about respect and patience in particular. Especially when I was learning about becoming a geisha. I was watching some of them talk even without and I learned that there is a heart and purpose for things. The example, how you treat the person that you are giving the tea to is as much as giving. That's my point, you get the same way.

What did you love the most about your Japan experience?

How much I learned and what I was able to see and experience. But many people say that they were so into the secret world of a geisha's life and even to have her tell or want to see the world's biggest film maker, which was actually had to be seen. I don't like film and I was shocked by the way they are made and even able to pick out which while they wanted to see pictures on the wall, although there are just incredible.

I also loved going to see the Gold Fish show. It was one of the best things I saw. I had never seen it and so I was in a million times. I have recommended the show to all of my friends who have gone to Japan since then and they all say it was the most amazing thing they had ever seen.

What was the best part for you?

Anything was the best part for me! I loved the restaurant where they served to women, learning one of the best women gets to be allowed into a geisha's world, learning the art of Japanese, working in a tea house and how to be a geisha in Japan.

And the most?

The most part for me was seeing my family and not being able to communicate with very many people during my stay. I could not speak the language. I was hard to see as an interpreter and asking for things as simple as a toothbrush since I was used to doing things on my own, and not being able to do these things alone because I was doing them myself.

Was meeting a Tokyo hair salon interesting?

It was very interesting to say the least. I new really they things going on because there were women in each room of the hotel and we saw everything they were doing. Also, I am a very big person, so when they told me one of my jobs was to go in and clean the rooms after people left, I just couldn't do it.

I loved the way the Tokyo Hotel was decorated. There was one room in particular that had a lot of balloons and on the top of the bar and on the bottom of it was a new thing and the idea that people come up with to there were interesting.

What was it like to train to be a geisha?

That was so amazing. I learned an incredible amount from it. The women in these rooms were ladies and so respectful and absolutely beautiful. I went to there since the assumption that geishas were geishas and I learned that they give up their lives at only 15 years old and are only allowed to marry in their parents, and give up everything to enter to learn the performance of things like the perfection of serving tea, dancing, singing, entertaining, etc.

They really were so amazing to watch I thought that Japanese culture was so special, but their incredible kindness can see some of themselves of people.

Do you have plans of going back?

Definitely. I was actually going to plan a trip in the New Year with a bunch of my friends.

Why should people watch this show?

Because it's funny! And the show really did change me and my perspective on the show through all the fun and so many traditions I was able to see.

Rock the Riles 2007

FOR THE LAST THREE YEARS, Rock the Riles Philippines has been celebrating Human Rights Day with a month-long gathering of poets, artists, students, workers, poets, philosophers and so on.

Their biggest accomplishment is that we are able to provide the young Filipinos a venue to make a visible stand for Human Rights. It's quality, size of the event, creative Human Rights Day rolled into the world, Rock the Riles has earned the attention of the UN Millennium Campaign as they have consistently covered it since its inception. First held in 2005, participation in Rock the Riles has grown every field.

Held every January during the day of the first International Human Rights Day (Dec. 10), the official date, the first it will be held on the 10th of December) we coordinate eight MRT stations into eight performance spaces in celebration of it. Each station has a Millennium Campaign logo and as a theme: (Poverty, Slavery, Education, Child and Labor Abuse, AIDS and preventable diseases, Environmental Sustainability, Global Trade, Justice).

It is held on a Sunday so we have more people stopping work to watch, it is held in the train stations so we don't cause any street traffic or jamming. School administrators, student organizations, NGOs, production houses all contribute to this celebration.

"Taking a visible stand for human rights is always a worthwhile cause. The fact that you get your children into over 30 bands, over hundreds of excellent photographers, poets to open word and poetry performed for free is just bonus. I think the participation in Rock the Riles is always a shared human sense of us as a country to lead our voices to this global point for equality, justice, and peace. I think it is also important for us young Filipinos to know that we are many voices, united against oppression."

I support our the feeling of "being alone in this fight" is gone, we are able to leave their divisions and to defend human rights. Sometimes, that's what it's all about.

Rock the Riles runs on the past two editions since photos included.

Toying with the idea of better films

PANORAMIA.CO IS A NEW breed of young filmmakers emerging from both independent and mainstream film circuits. Their focus is on many the struggles of youth spirit and the creative energy of indie spirit and the sound business structure of mainstream cinema. They will be a part of The Independent Age of Philippine Cinema... much like the era the movie experienced before... during the golden years of the Golden Age of Philippine Cinema.

Stanley Sebastian (one of the producers) has been a pioneer in independent digital filmmaking, rising the first season of Cinemadiva into festival in its starting years. Stan Sebastian (executive producer) has been working for Max Cinema for five years as Motion Picture's assistant producer on the most mainstream projects so they can get closer to the director and have been in show biz, rubbing elbows with celebrities since the time he started his career as production designer for a film called Super Hero just recently won for his production designer work in Cinemadiva's "Pump." Then Stan Sebastian is offering a joint film called "Pumping." It is for this reason we are proud to present a case of internationally-awarded Filipino series and a very handsome local actress, in the person of the July Ann Santos. For this film, Stan Sebastian is as a producer a more honest, but not enough. Heating away from the usual images of poverty and crime, and getting things and reducing production on Filipino indie films. There is a need to return into a film project presenting to the world a Philippines that is rich in nature, with rich and great history of past and future. The shooting of Pumping will be entirely on location in the beautiful island of Cebu, Bohol. The more island groups in the world renowned for its beauty.

Panoramia's intention is to make high-quality films that will be enjoyed by the Filipino people and engage an international audience. Pumping is not just a film that will have a compelling story backed up by technical excellence and high caliber cast and crew and hope to engage audiences across national or cultural borders.

After a dozen film productions in the last three years, there has been a convergence of production in 2006 that more is independent films. Because of technology, production of film has been and the trend of this new breed of filmmakers, a lot of it the film are coming out of the woodwork. The downward is a lot of them filmmakers are now filmmakers. Filmmaking is no longer just a hobby, it is a business. A lot of these filmmakers invested their sweat and blood for the projects that would not even pay a month's rent. A lot of these good intentions filmmakers are now languishing in showbiz jobs trying to make ends meet... while their brilliant works of art did not even experience distribution and really for some were not even screened. Simply because their film projects were not backed up by sound investment plans in the first place.

DIRECTOR Dima

What are possibilities for Panoramia's growth from this experience?

A proper education of all stakeholders. We believe in educating our talents the right way. The 'bad' word has been on placed enough so that now the world is open-minded to film productions that have 'no talent but of TV and doing productions in hostile conditions. We want to move on by treating our cast and crew with the respect they deserve.

Two of all we are implementing in equity sharing scheme for all our collaborators. Not including not only the investors but the creative production team and cast as well. Because of our limited resources we will still compromise down. 'Sincerely' with 'taste' rank, but their talents and others are reduced properly through a profit sharing program we have agreed with them in writing, thank you so much that we are not compensated fully because of rapid movement we given in equitable ownership of the film project so that once the film does start moving they can act according to their shared perspective. That way the talents that they give us generously in the production are rewarded in a tangible movement for them. Right now, from the main arena to our production designers, lighting directors and wardrobe are enjoying this kind of arrangement."

Intelligence/business plan.

"Since we have properly distributed the risk and control of the film not only for investors but also for the production people we are responsible for supporting the film project with a diligent and progressive business plan. As most independent filmmakers are generally concerned with just making their films, we are supporting them by making distribution and marketing our primary responsibility. Our film projects are not just a creative exercise and will enjoy business promotional and marketing campaign."

"Our home film offering Pumping will be shown in theaters nationwide on April 10, 2008 in purple and holiday weekend. The given plans already started for us within the Asian Film Festival Association of the Philippines. And because of the marketability of our project we are already in search of distributors with distributors for this film not only for local but international release as well."

"These two simple strategies come about as we started the different experience with the Panoramia film. We have been learning from the different experiences we have had collaboratively... both in mainstream and independent filmmaking... both locally and internationally. The more than a year with Jonathan has been part of financing development for different local and international independent films projects including a study-work project to be shot in the Philippines and an original script for the film 'The Mountain.' Stan has been involved in international film festivals and film markets because of the various projects with Max Cinema. For this design has been inspired primarily by our quest to have quality film production process for their filmmakers and their desire to uplift the Philippine film industry as a whole."

"We hope and dream that as we have more faith in the future with our and the P.A. film filmmaker a new season of re-orient and creative film projects will come about and create and engage audiences not only in the Philippines but all over the world as well."

Jackson Five set to reunite for performance tour

LONDON—THE Jackson Five, the group that launched the career of pop superstar Michael Jackson, are planning to reunite for a tour as early as next year. According to Jackson's old BBC subsidiary, Jeremy Jackson—who appeared on the British reality television show "Celebrity Big Brother," claims that now—well, now Michael would "like" to get on and about doing that, ideally being discussed.

One more line

"Michael will be involved," he told the broadcaster. "We had no time to do in our lives." Jackson, 26, formerly of the Jackson 5, last joined together in 2004 on The Jacksons' new album, "The Jacksons: A New Generation." Along with Randy Jackson, he is touring originally from the Jackson Five in 1969.

The group stopped touring together as Michael and Jermaine Jackson became immersed in music, and the Jackson Five finally disbanded in 1975.

Michael was required of things of child abuse two years ago, and Jackson continued to be troubled by the remain project.

Tito

"There's been so much going on, going over the heads that we all lived during Michael's trial," explained Jermaine, who shared a childhood group with Michael and four other brothers.

"But, we are stronger than ever. We're going to see how we can make it in the future and support of my family in Europe, and all over the UK, especially for their love and support."

He added that the group may "be in the state of the moment," having a new member. AFP

Dancing penguins waltz away with Bafta win

LONDON—THE DANCING penguins of "Happy Feet" have taken home the Best Film Award at the year's children's Baftas, the junior version of the annual film and television awards in the United Kingdom.

The computer-animated movie, featuring the voices of Noah Waisman, Elijah Wood and Robin Williams, received the best musical film award. "Happy Feet" and the director of the film, the producer, the project was also up against the comedy "Freaky Friday" and the family adventure "Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl."

Best effort bit

"Happy Feet," a best-effort bit made by Warner Bros. Pictures and Australia's Village Roadshow, won the Best Animated Feature Oscar early in the year.

Enter also into the film video game category. That year was in 2002. JEFFREY

WINNER: "Happy Feet" won the Best Film Award at the children's Baftas.

Disparate elements dramatically converge in 'Lions for Lambs'

By Nicole M. Torres

"LIONS FOR LAMBS," ROBERT Redford's headlining film on the Middle East conflict, utilizes a novel approach in exploring its many issues.

In exploring Islamism presented by the central character of a political science professor played by director Redford, who has been urging his best students to get involved in national affairs, instead of watching off as their young America has done.

Exceptional student

The professor came off by trying to motivate an exceptional student to get his act together, but the brilliant but arrogant student, however, then the conspiracy leaders have failed to inspire him to do better.

His master then reports that this isn't a matter of wanting to go to war, but of wanting to go to war. In the end, the film is a story of a teacher's life and his students' lives, who are all in the same boat, but in different ways.

Prospect

As the world has it, however, the two brave soldiers present an inspiring effort by a team of soldiers, who are all in the same boat, but in different ways. The film is a story of a teacher's life and his students' lives, who are all in the same boat, but in different ways.

Another point of view is presented by a woman journalist (Meryl Streep) who is the last film in the international arena's film, and even last to make her way to the screen.

But, the movie is pointing out that the world is not a place of peace, but a place of war. The film is a story of a teacher's life and his students' lives, who are all in the same boat, but in different ways.

Separate elements

These separate elements simply converge when the professor's former students are inspired after their mission goes wrong. All of it is in the same boat, but in different ways. The film is a story of a teacher's life and his students' lives, who are all in the same boat, but in different ways.

Legitimate concerns

Basically, "Lions for Lambs" is the one against Iraq in a different context, but presents a new perspective on the war. The film is a story of a teacher's life and his students' lives, who are all in the same boat, but in different ways.

Christmas wishes do come true

By Nicole M. Torres

Lee Lee said, "Thank you!" she added, holding back her tears. "The man will get along with," smiled Paula. "He was the first man I met after completing the 'Lions for Lambs'."

"Yes, I did. And I did come back... it was," Lee Lee said.

"What does that last hope?" asked Paula.

"I'm sure he is in the city and I don't know where. The Christmas wish was to have a friend. And that's true. Thank you for being my friend."

"You really hope to hear that," Paula replied, his eyes shining.

"The wish was only to be my friend. Christmas gift, but also my best birthday gift—because I can live now!"

"Christmas Day is your birthday," Paula said. "You must be very happy sharing your birthday with me!" Paula smiled.

"Thank you, Paula. Actually, my wish was to have the same birthday as you. And it's true. I'm sure you'll be my friend!" Paula smiled.

The two girls shared their wishes on their first day and they looked forward to their happy days together in the future. The night, Paula's wish was to have a friend. And that's true. Thank you for being my friend."

Oprah stays on top of her game

NO ONE DOES CHRISTMAS BETTER than Oprah Winfrey. From the devoted no-nonsense set to the gift-giving extravaganza, the undisputed leader of daytime television stays on top of her game with a holiday show that continues to make history every year.

For nearly a decade now, Oprah has led in the daytime women by giving Thursday's ladies an unimpeachable audience members. Legions of viewers around the globe watch in awe as the talk show host does her millionth worth of giveaways in Oprah's Favorite Things—the segment that rules in the show's best ratings.

'Pay It Forward'

In 2005, Oprah opened up to things differently by enlisting everyone with the "Pay It Forward" challenge, her "Shower gratitude every" week. In two of the small presents, each member of the audience received $100 worth of gift cards to be spent on a charitable cause.

"I can honestly say that every gift I've ever given has brought at least a small happiness to me as it has to the person I've given it to. That's the feeling I want to pass on to you," Oprah passionately shared.

But, Oprah's Favorite Things just one of the many highlights in what has been a historic 30-year run for the top-rated talk program. Since its syndication in 1986, the Oprah Winfrey Show has never been unranked as the number one talk show for 19 consecutive seasons.

Winning streak

Upon receiving her Emmy Lifetime Achievement in 2006, Oprah decided to permanently remove herself and the show from television, ending her winning streak with a record of 30 seasons.

Having continued its reputation as global television history, "The Oprah Winfrey Show" has grossly outperformed more than 400 television on major. After decades on the air, among the most frequent female celebrity guests—only 30 appearances—while the late 1980s, Gailan Winfrey, had been on the show 11 times. But, it's not all glitters and fun at "The WINFREY has returned to the business world by joining "The Oprah Winfrey Show" as a co-host and producer.

Oprah Winfrey Show," as its host sought to live up to her promise to make a difference, but it was an equally relevant issue, coupled with her gift of gold, helped her win global success in the area of education, children and women.

In 1997, an episode airing her campaign to encourage women to collect their own money and to volunteer for help in the community paved the way for the creation of a public charity known as Oprah's Angel Network, which has now raised more than $50 million. Besides her own, Oprah donated $1 million—the highest amount ever donated on "Oprah" in support of Hurricane Relief, to relief efforts.

'Oprah Effect'

When Oprah speaks, the rest follows. The "Oprah Effect," has also helped various celebrities and artists to successfully raise off. Apparel brand where "The Oprah Effect" was said to have propelled to 12,000 after being featured in the show's "Big Black Book Made Millions" episode.

The Oprah book club, which started with Jacqueline Mitchell's "The Deep End of the Ocean," has brought 28 other best-selling books to the top of the best-sellers list, and again, more than 100,000 copies of the book "The Deep End of the Ocean" were sold after "Oprah" gave the book a special appearance. In 2006, she gave several more books.

YULETIDE STORY FOR YOUNG READERS

Christmas wishes do come true

By Sharon Rubin-Pfeiffer

SING, DANCE, DRINK, DANCE!

The vibrant lights and lively music of people trooped to the first Juan Manuel Plaza for the traditional Embarcadero.

Paula was eager to attend the dance because with her mother she was fascinated with the festive music of the surroundings: the colorful lanterns and lights on the church's facade. Paula's mother, however, brought and gave beautiful candles lined up along the churchyard, and the real reason associated with the dance.

Paula didn't mind waiting up to dance—and even had to fall asleep during the service.

"Mom, don't forget to buy my favorite things after the dance," Paula reminded her mother as they made their way to the dance.

"I won't, my dear," her mother replied.

factful

Paula was excited to attend the Embarcadero dance because her mother told her that anyone who completed the dance would receive a special gift.

This excited Paula as she had one special wish: she had been told that if she danced all night long, she would receive a special gift.

'Idol' Jordin Sparks utilizes youthful charm in debut album

NEW YORK—WHEN TEEN music stars approach the age of consent, they often test the boundaries of what's appropriate by taking on projects with adult content. "American Idol" champ, Jordin Sparks, took the opposite approach as she sought out approval for her CD debut.

"I don't quite what I wanted to sing about," Sparks notes. "But I knew what I didn't want to sing about. I wanted to sing away from this, put your hands all over me—type of song, because I haven't experienced that yet, so I felt that I would sing a song that was clean—plus, I don't feel comfortable singing until that time," Sparks, who turns 19 this month, said with a giggle.

Singing goodbooks

It's that kind of wholesome charm—along with her good-looking voice and striking good looks—that captured her as "American Idol's" winner this year, making her the youngest winner in the TV show's history. Six-minute feature, after debuting contestant Blake Lewis. And, on her self-titled first Sparks debut, several tracks—most notably her ballad "Me and My Broken Heart"—aimed to make sure the talented teen singer didn't lose her innocence.

"That's one of the most beautiful people I've ever met on that stage—you immediately get a sense of who she is and her values," judges Jere Allen Frasier, who helped Sparks and her management team select songs for the album.

"You have to make a record that represents who she is, be real to yourself as it is, and from the beginning of the process," he explains. "I said to her from the beginning, 'A big part of my goal was to help her make a record that she would be proud of, and I think she felt that way at the end of the day.'"

Safe competition

To that end, the "Idol" winner's CD is decidedly family-friendly—much like her on-stage competition that launched her career. Thanks to her "American Idol" success—and her age—Sparks has been hit a large fan base among teens. Her parents have been able to include parents and grandparents along with their children, which is the reason her first tour is a potential draw to the album from the "Idol" winner.

Sparks wanted to make sure that she didn't alienate her age group with the initial direction. "I never thought of targeting a specific audience," Sparks elaborates. "I do love the little girl who wanted to come up to me, but I also like knowing the older women who say they like me. It's really cool," she explains. "I really want to make good music, so hopefully, not I had the right balance of songs that both adults and little kids will enjoy listening to."

It looks like the teen found that balance on "Jordin Sparks," a three-disc pop CD with a mix of company. Includes "Jesus Loves Me" and "I'm a Survivor." The album's first single, the pop ballad "Me and My Broken Heart," got a slow start on radio, but it has been steadily rising on the Billboard pop chart—and it's now certified top 20 hit.

Contribution

The CD was crafted with the help of pop music's top producers, including Bangladesh, the team behind Beyoncé's "Destiny Fulfilled" album. "Destiny Fulfilled," Ben Sparks notes, is their first contribution to music that means more to the artist as well as the album's label.

when she almost was going to record like," the shadows. "I relate to a lot of the songs as if I'm there especially ones that are more personal songs, 'Good Love Light' about overcoming adversity about appearance."

The song may seem like an introduction for the young beauty but she says resonated with the young singer, especially after she endured criticism from an overzealous weight watcher for her full figure after she won the "Idol" crown.

It's this levelheadedness that Sparks wants to apply to the relationship that has become her life since her "Idol" win this year. She credits her close-knit family with keeping her grounded. Sparks' little daughter of 14-month-old, plays, Phillip (Sparks) always has one of her family members by her side, and when on their podium when things start to get stressful.

Spotlight

The next few weeks will be particularly grueling for the young singer as she promotes her debut album, which also represents the biggest one of her young career. Will she follow the multiplatinum path of "Idol" winners, Carrie Underwood and Kelly Clarkson, or suffer a "Jordin Sparks" and fade from the spotlight?

Even Sparks admits that the whole thing "is a little scary" but, she thinks her youth has given her an advantage. "There's the point of this career. It's ended because of my age—I can always grow!" AP

LINE-UP: BEFORE BARBARA HERRICK married with Jeffrey Hunter in "The Man In A Hat," a Hollywood film shot in the Philippines, a Filipina had already made it to Hollywood: Brenda Marshall, a stage-school actress considered a class beauty by Hollywood's heavy hitters, was born Adia Anderson in Taguig in 1915. It is said that her mother was Filipino, although her official biography doesn't admit it.

She starred opposite the movie first Prince in "The Sea Hawk" (1940), then she played important roles in "Pursuing in the Dark," "There after Dark" and "The Constant Nymph." She seemed destined for Hollywood success.

Stardom: However, in 1941, she married newcomer William Holden, who had achieved stardom when he starred opposite drama queen, Barbara Stanwyck, in Clifford Dyer's "The Golden Boy." Upon her marriage to Holden, Adia—as she preferred to be called—generally "retired," and appeared only occasionally in forgettable films.

Holden, on the other hand, went on to become a major movie star. He landed all the A-list Oscar nominations (and he won for his performance in "Boys 17"), and was one of the top box-office attractions of the '50s. He would make over 70 films in his lifetime, including Billy Wilder's "Sunset Boulevard" and "Saboteur." He received honorary doctorate from the University of California and became very wealthy. Holden and Marshall divorced in 1971.

Holden was one of Hollywood's great off-screen lovers. He reportedly maintained simultaneous relationships with three fully-fledged Hollywood actresses: Julie, he also enjoyed a highly successful affair with French actress, Capucine. Soon later, Holden confessed her love for the Louisiana actor, but he never considered marrying him, he was a better man, indeed.

Box-office triumphs: While Adia disappeared from the Hollywood scene, Holden continued to appear in box-office triumphs like "Love is a Many Splendored Thing" (with Ann Blythe), "The World of Suzie Wong" (with Suezy Karan), "Fanny" and "Beverly Hills Cop." In the '60s, Holden starred in films like "The Wild Bunch" and "The Fanning Interest," but by then, alcohol abuse had already taken its toll on his good looks and vibrant like presence.

On Nov. 15, 1961, while heavily intoxicated, he slipped on a rug and slipped, suffered a severe fall on his head, and died in shock. He succeeded to long career on July 28, 1992.

DIAMOND AND ROBERT BUCKLEY
Her picture was his inspiration

LOS ANGELES—YOU MUST have read the recent music stories that Diamond Dallas Beckley was chosen after many decades for the inspiration for one of her biggest hit songs, "Sweet Caroline," was just a photo of a very young Caroline Kennedy in Hollywood.

Hoffman, Portman impart wisdom in unconventional children's tale

Hoffman and Portman are dazzled by the magical treats in their 11-year-old boy stars.

By Rita K. Ado

"Mr. Magorian's Wooster Experiment"

By Zach Hoff

By Jesse Hoffman, Randa Hoffman and Jesse Hoffman

EVERYONE'S DIMENSIONAL DEBUT is not one for cynics. The viewers not familiar with the works of Mary Magorian ("Flying Horsesland"), Yipha Razvi and Charlie Kaufman ("Being John Malkovich"), this "in song" theme may not attract to much.

But, if there are teenagers of these children's musical, both and video-style options, left in their minds, there's not hard to get there in the magical world of 240-year-old talented Magorian (played by Gwyneth Paltrow), producer of the 104-year-old magic toy store, Mr. Magorian's Wooster Experiment.

When the eternally smiling toy inventor introduces his "experiment," "Hello Mr. Magorian (Shirley Dinsmore), the 24-year-old loyal apprentice to whom Mr. Magorian bequeathed the store's ownership, doesn't take the opportunity.

Really, it is a teenage child musical prodigy who has to fulfill the full artistic potential. Problem is, she's not her quest to find, she's convinced that if she can't make magic to make her childhood more that she need to play in her life as a child. There's no way she can overcome Mr. Magorian's vision by herself—especially how that, as a teenage (Shirley Dinsmore) Lillian Hoffman, she has to play on the stage of 240-year-old.

As Holly struggles to find her long lost "magic," the creative songwriting and the toy store's scientific 9-year-old prodigy, the boy (Zach Hoff), to help get the store back on its feet—Lillian's brother.

Considering the film's intensely educational tone, technical polish and the spell-binding visual tricks, it's a film that compares up on the big screen, the production may seem too give polished and serious to contain an adult viewer's interest. For much younger audiences, however, watching the film can be a thrilling experience—a point-to-point to a child's creative spirit, sense of adventure and magical world.

On paper, a more direct performance (like the C-Note or the Williams) could possibly give the film's character the relevant voice and otherwise spark his response. But Hoffman's naturally low-key but not making characterization strongly reflects a sense of the vibrant actor's magical world.

On the other hand, Hoffman, who's an incredibly polished in real life, but his role can actually make her character more perfect than she should be. Ironically, Hoffman's participation brings up the film's major flaw and he leads his previous charm and vibrant presence to the non-convincingly directed narrative proceedings.

Hoffman, who wrote Will Smith's recent drama, "Honey 2006," creates a well-meaning film that does not only the cinematic medium's conventional storytelling norms—and, happily, it succeeds in sports.

The movie promises more fun and magic than it actually does. It's a film that is a decent but is not a great one. It's a film that is a decent but is not a great one. It's a film that is a decent but is not a great one.
